ANALYSIS: Jumbo Chicken Wings – A Game Worth Betting On... Some industry participants are raising a collective eyebrow in response to the current wing market and its apparent strength. No, we're not approaching football season or even in mid March Madness mode, but that doesn't seem to matter, does it? Wing supplies are tight and market values are trending higher. Declared by many as one of the greatest sporting weekends ever, May 1st-3rd featured a never before seen number of premier events. If you weren't watching the NBA or NHL playoffs, maybe you were glued to the television to see longstanding and hated MLB rivalries take to the field. Also this weekend, there was the Kentucky Derby, NFL draft, PGA Match Play Tournament and much anticipated Mayweather-Pacquiao fight. Maybe you missed one or two of these events, but it's difficult to believe you missed them all. And if you're an avid sports fan, like many of us, then there's also a good chance you indulged in the ever so popular finger food that is now synonymous with sports, chicken wings. This week, when buyers of jumbo wings returned to the spot market in dire need of restocking their pipelines, they realized early on that it was going to be a difficult task. Offerings, beyond regular commitments, have become increasingly scarce and sellers that do have product are holding it with the upmost confidence. While many of the sporting event results may have been unpredictable this past weekend, one thing's for sure, wing popularity continues to increase and that's a game you can bet on.

Insiders Poultry Situation

Chicken industry observers are still undecided on the strength of boneless breast meat and tenders. What we're certain of is that both lines are rated full steady and they're trading at levels that are full market or better, but there's still something missing. The aggressive tone that so often coincides with a firm market is not present, at least not to degree that the industry expected. With that said, both lines were left unchanged this week. Wings, on the other hand, are being hotly pursued following what many are considering to be one of the greatest sporting weekends ever. Market values are full market or better for jumbo sized product specifically. Whole birds and WOGs are well supported, as is thigh meat. Whole legs, leg quarters, drumsticks and leg meat are still under varying degrees of pressure. Supplies are deemed at least adequate to fully adequate for spot needs which are no better than fair. Also worth noting is that sources are beginning to report that finding available trucks has become increasingly difficult.

Dallas-Based Wingstop Files for $86.25M IPO

Dallas restaurant chain Wingstop on Wednesday announced it filed paperwork for an $86.25 million stock debut under the ticker symbol WING. According to American City Business Journals, the company has not specified how many shares will be offered, but has applied to trade on the NASDAQ.

Speculation has swirled for months on a potential initial public offering. With more than 670 locations, Wingstop has more restaurants than competitor Buffalo Wild Wings did when it started trading publicly in late 2003, according to the Motley Fool.

"I want to say we're going to be the McDonald's of the wing industry, and basically, we are at this point," Wingstop Executive Chairman Jim Flynn said in 2012. "Because there's nobody else this big."

In 2014, Wingstop reported annual net income of nearly $9 million. With that financial context, The Motley Fool estimated its IPO could raise up to $100 million and value the chain around $500 million.

That will help fuel Wingstop's growth strategy of 2,500 units and expand its international presence, according to paperwork filed with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.
